Government Carries Its Measure Which Opposition Contends Is Only Sought in Order to Win Electoral Advantage

(Special to the Monitor)

WESTMINSTER-It cannot be said that the introduction of the government's new plural voting bill was rethe opposition side its reception was more derisive than seriously condemna-

Strictly speaking it is not a plural voting bill, in the sense of the famous 'one man one vote" measure of the "Newcastle program." but it is defined as a bill to impose a penalty on an elector who votes in more than one constituency at a parliamentary election. It will thus be seen that in the case of by-elections any one having a vote in the constituency, whether he resides there or not, can exercise his right to vote. Under the proposed measure a man may continue to be registered in as many constituencies as he pleases with a proviso that he can only exercise one of his votes at a general election. On these grounds, and for the general O'Grady, voted against its introduction.

Apart from which, however viewed, could only be regarded as of secondary importance?

Called Party Measure

If the government were quite honest in their answer to that question, Mr. Smith declared, they would have to admit that the present measure was brought in simply with the object of gaining an electoral advantage against the Unionist party. Mr. Pease had told them a year ago that the effect of a measure such as this would be in, he thought, 260 constituencies, to disfranchise 1000 persons at present exercising the vote and that a majority of these would be Unionist voters.

The government, he said in conclusion had abandoned the correction of all the anomalies because the only part of the whole scheme, to which they attached the slightest importance, was that which would, as they believed, improve their are larger and are further back from prospects at the polls.

NOW at the very height of the season-Misses' and Young Ladies' Suits to the number of two hundred and fourteen-of the regular qualities which sell from twenty-five to forty dollars-will be sold at eighteen-fifty and twenty-

Two manufacturers, with whom we do a very large business, took an order for a great number of suits for one of the finest specialty stores in the Middle West. They were in the process of making when the great freshet came.

Realizing that there would be no use shipping them they were put aside for more urgent orders, and have just been finished.

We were notified that these suits could be bought at nearly one-third less than the prices of a week or two ago, and they were purchased.

Suits that were exact duplicates of these purchased were in our stock—these have been marked down to the same prices, and the entire lot formerly priced twenty-five to forty, will be sold for eighteen-fifty and twenty-five dollars.

One of the eight attractive styles is illustrated at 18.50-models to suit the young lady who desires the fashionable blouse effects in Russian or Balkan money from the New Haven road. Mr. Brown referred to his accounts and said that Choate had received $13,982 and $7282 and $6950 at various times for rep resenting the New Haven railroad.

Mr. Choate explained that he had at first intended to appear as counsel for Mr. Mellen personally, but on Examiner Prouty's advice decided to appear as a private citizen.

Mr. Brown was called to the witness stand and in answer to questions from Examiner Prouty as to charges on the New Haven books for advertising, found by him, he read a number of vouchers covering a period from Jan. 27, 1911 to February, 1913, for an aggregate sum of $95,528.02 in favor of the Boston News Bureau Advertising Agency. Mr. Brown stated that the aggregate credit to the bureau since Dec. 1, 1912, was $92,006.02, This was an average of $32,000 month.

Examiner Prouty asked here "Were these payments all on the New Haven books Mr. Brown?" Witness replied:

Mr. Brown further testified that in July 1908 the records showed $100,000 in notes had been paid by Mr. Mellen to the navigation company for cash given Mr. Mellen presumably by check. Other payments by Mr. Mellen to the navigation company Mr. Brown continued were $100,000 in 1908 for eash and October. 1908, $260,400 in exchange for 14,000 shares of Old Colony stock at $186 a

DAINTY MARQUISETTE FROCK

Model suited to all soft materials

COLLEGE girls who are looking for suitable gowns to wear at the closing functions of the season and all those who are preparing for a happy time will welcome this graceful simple evening gown.

In the illustration, it is made of marquisette with trimming of lace. The skirt is just a two-piece one, but a little full at the waist line, in conformity with the latest style, and the bodice is effectively draped; therefore all the materials that are thin and soft are appropriate, crepe de chine, chiffon, Brussels net, as well as the favorite marquisette and fine cotton

The arrangement of the flounces over .the skirt is a happy one. For evening functions, the low neck and short sleeves are the accepted ones, but, if the bodice is wanted for afternoon wear, it can be made with high neck and with long sleeves. This dress is all white, but colors are being much worn and yellow is a favorite. Amber-colored crepe meteo.e, with trimming of ivory colored shadow lace, would make a dainty, attractive gown.

For the medium size, the bodice will require 31/2 yards of material 27, 21/8 yards 36 or 1% yards 44 inches wide, with 3% yards of lace 51/2 inches wide; the skirt will require 31/2 yards 27, 23/4 rards 36 or 44 inches wide with 10 yards of lace 5 inches wide for the flounces. The pattern of the bodice (7717) is cut in sizes from 34 to 40 inches bust measure; of the skirt (7533) from 22 to 30 inches waist measure. They can be bought at any May Manton agency, or will be sent by mail. Address 102 West Thirty-second street, New York, or Masonic Temple, Chicago.

WILD PLANTS ON THE LAWN

M ANY wild plants are readily transplanted and will flourish in cultivation. The shad bush, with its early white flowers, is very graceful and decorative, and has the added virtue of attracting birds. The pokeberry is somewhat rank in growth, but makes a handsome lawn plant. The purple elderberry is very pretty with its crown of white flowers, but the scarlet elderberry surpasses it in beauty.

Many of the smaller plants take transplanting kindly, says the Ladies World. The jack-in-the-pulpit is one of these-after its strange flower is gone, there are still the triple leaves and later the bright stalk of berries. The wakerobin is a pleasing spring guest, the large white variety being especially beautiful. Hepaticas bloom even more freely in a garden than in the woods. Mint may be taken from the brookside and planted in the vegetable garden. And last, but most beautiful of all, are the many varieties of wood ferns that will beautify the porch and shady corners with their cool green.

Authority was granted the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Company by a special act of Congress to expend not more than $150,000 out of the amount due the United States under the act of March 4, 1901, for the Jefferson memorial. Following this act the board of public improvements of the city of St. Louis stipulated that as a part of the plan of the restoration of Forest park the exposition company should erect the memorial at a cost of not less than $200,000, Through its board of directors the exposition company accepted the proposition, so that the United States government, the city of St. Louis, and the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Company are joint sponsors for the Jefferson mem-

Impressive in its classic simplicity, the building marks the site of what was the main entrance of the Louisiana Purchase exposition. It stretches across the greensward for 300 feet and rises to a height of 48 feet. Built of stone, concrete and bronze, it will be a safe depository for valuable records which are to be placed under its roof. Beneath the high arch of the center rotunda will stand the fine statue of Thomas Jefferson carved in Italian marble and designed by Karl Bitter. Upon the walls will be tablets of bronze bearing inscriptions relative to the history of the Louisiana Purchase, including an extract on the subject from President Jefferson's special message to Congress on Jan. 15, 1804, nearly two months before the United States flag was raised at St. Louis; and Karl Bitter's immortal Monroe, Marbois and Livingston putting their signatures to the treaty of acquisi tion on April 30, 1803.

Democratic congressmen are so slow in recommending men for the vacant places. Up to 10 days ago Mr. Burleson had received but 16 recommendations from congressmen. Then he sent out a letter to the representatives of the districts where the vacancies are, urging speedy action. This brought in 31 more recommendations, and that is all that has been accomplished in the way of filling the 200 vacancies. No wonder so many Democrats are echoing the words of Mr. Flanagan of Texas, "What are we here for if it isn't the offices!" Nor are they likely to be placated by the excuse that the congressmen are so busy with the tariff bill that they have no time for matters of patronage. What is the tariff in importance compared with the postoffice at Grigsby's Station? The modern university, as exemplified by the curriculum that obtains in Berkeley, lays its chief stress on vocational training and is, in fact, disposed rather to slight the merely culclassed under the head of the liberal arts. Sir Richard drew from his own experience when he said:

THOSE WHO CONTROL

The owners of any newspaper are its readers, the public, and their approval of the policies any paper is absolutely necessary for its success. The suppression, distortion, or falseness of news published becomes then a matter of public importance and the real continued support of the paper by that public depends greatly upon their belief in the accuracy of its news and character of the policies by which it is conducted. Let a paper grow lax in its censorship of the news and follow by retraction and denial and the public will cease to quote it as authority, and their interest in it will become more purely a selfish one.

> The hearty and intense support given the Monitor by its readers proves that as a leading exponent of clean journalism the paper is making an intense appeal which is being answered from practically every part of the world.

The readers of a daily paper also exercise another form of power as censors of the advertising which is published. No advertiser can continue wastefully expending money which brings no return and the refusal of people to patronize any but those whose motives are right is causing advertisers to stop such advertising. By patronizing Monitor advertisers whenever practicable readers of the Monitor may not only be reasonably sure of satisfaction in dealing with those whose advertising is dependable and whose profits are fair but it will reenforce the belief of these advertisers that honest advertising pays best and constructively displace the dishonest with that which is honest.

STILL UNSOLD

MEMPHIS-It is the impression parties . who have circulated widely through the lower Mississippi valley that there is still considerable cotton in the hands of merchants, growers and speculators.

Amount of funds needed for development of the new crop will depend a good Green Cananea 7@71/4. Nipissing 9@91/4. deal on how much of the old cotton is sold. In a single instance, a holder is known to have about 10,000 bales, which during the past season could have pound, but were held for a higher price.

GOOD BUSINESS STILL ENJOYED BY STEAMSHIPS

All Lines Enjoy Unusual Prosperity Owing to High Freight Rates and Heavy Tonnage

INCREASE IN PROFITS

The reports of ocean steamship com panies now appearing attest the remark able prosperity which practically al ocean carriers enjoyed in 1912. Not only did the big lines prosper, but some of the smaller ones were able to record even more striking increases in earnings than the larger companies. The British and German companies were, of course, the chief beneficiaries, those two nations being the principal factors in the ocean carrying trade. But the International Mercantile Marine lines also shared in the remarkable trade expansion and the boon of high freight rates. Gross earnings for the year ended Dec. 31 last should show a materia increase over the 1911 year's $39,000 000 and part of the gain will undoubt edly be saved for net. The company of course, suffered a serious loss in the sinking of the Titanic, just a year ago, involving as it did a net loss above all insurance of $2,000,000. The annua report will not be out for some weeks yet but it is expected to make a satsfactory showing. Earnings of the big German and Engish companies present striking contrasts with those of 1911. Gross.of the Cunard Steamship Company, for the year ended Dec. 31 was $17,457,527 compared with $14,974,943 in the previous year, ar increase of $2,482,584, or over 16 per cent. Total net earnings were $5,767, 406, an increase of $1,694,591, or better than 41 per cent, compared with 1911. This was a new high record for the Cunard. The North German Lloyd carned gross of $12,341,121 against $9,887,404 in 1911, an increase of $2,453,717, or over 24 per cent. Surplus after charges was $3,495, 468, an increase of $1,612,043, or 85 per cent. The company increased its dividend rate from 5 per cent to 7 per cent and then was able to carry to surplus account $1,412,968, which was $1,015,781 more than was so carried over in the 47% previous year. This also constituted a new high record of earnings for the North German Lloyd, The Hamburg-American line broke all previous income records by a wide margin. Total net was $14,204,000 compared with $11,830,000 in the previous year, an increase of $2,374,000, or over 20 per July ..... cent. After interest, reserve and depter ciation charges the balance for dividends was $3,512,300, out of which a 10 per Sept.... was declared.

THE GRAIN MARKET C. F. & G. W. Eddy, Inc., of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, received the following from their Chicago correspondent: Wheat-Gains of nearly 1 cent a bushel were registered during the forenoon session. Over night advances were sharp and reflected a strong foreign situation. At most centers abroad wheat values were materially higher. This again offset reports of an increased area from the Cana dian Northwest and generally favorable condition in the winter wheat belt. Leadership seems to be on the bull side, and this is having an important effect on sentiment. Those favoring higher prices are encouraged by the level of Liverpool values as compared with Duluth prices.

The movement from Argentine has diminished and great strength has recently been shown in the Buenos Ayres.

Next to the big intercollegiate championships this event of the University of Pennsylvania has come to be the big outdoor track meet of the year and the titles won in the various events are among the most highly prized in the country. Not only are the college and school relay banners much sought after, but the trophies in the individual events are highly prized.

That the standard of performance at this year's meet will be fully as high as any previous one is assured, and it will be a big surprise to some of the closest followers of college and school athletics if more than one new record is not established tomorrow.

The chief of the relay races will of course be the one, two and four-mile intercollegiate championships. While Harvard, Cornell and Yale will be missed from these events, the other universities have entered teams that promise to force the present records hard. in spite of the fact that they are already very low.

Illinois, Michigan and Pennsylvania are generally regarded as the three colleges that will fight it out for the one-mile title. ## RIVALRY KEEN BETWEEN TWO UNIVERSITIES

Interest in Sports Has Increased to Great Extent at Oxford and Cambridge in Past Few Months

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON - The past two terms at Oxmany branches of sport in which they indulge. Some games, as is inevitable, excite far more interest than others, but during the winter terms there is no doubt that rugby football, rowing, association football, hockey and track and field sports are the chief items, and also the most popular, their popularity being probably in the order named above. Among the Oxford colleges, Brasenoss has secured the best athletic record during the last two terms, having won the rugby football competition and the athletic competition, besides making a fairly good fight in the torpid races on the river. Both F. H. Knott, the wellknown rugby football player, and A. N. S. Jackson, of track fame, come from President Lynch is evidently going to this college. Three weeks Magdalen also had a good side, but the of Boston, Washington and Philadelphia game has not yet reached a very high standard. Unlike Cambridge, who adopt the league system, many of the Oxford competitions are managed on the cup-tie, or knock-out system.

At Cambridge, Pembroke headed the league in association football, while Trinity, whose eleven included four Blues, were a good side. The hockey league, which contains as many sides as does the association league, produced a large amount of enthusiasm. Jesus College finished at the head of the list, though Pembroke, with three Blues, ran them very close. The intercollegiate athletic competition was won by Kings College, which had the support of the worrderful all-round athlete, H. S. Q. Ashinghave been won there and in 1875 the ton. The Lent races were good and some promising form was seen. First Trinity retained the headship, while Jesus College. Sidney Sussex, Pembroke, Lady Margaret and Third Trinity did well, and the racing of the summer term should be well up to the average.

> Operators have often in the past had to work from 8 o'clock in the morning till 9 o'clock at night on demand, and while they were of course paid for the extra time this order of things meant that the employees never had actual command of their own leisure. They must always expect to be ready to surrender any plan-at the call of the employer. It is now argued that where there is need for this command of all a worker's time there should be a regular compensation, adjusted to cover value

It is a conceded fact that any ployer who uses only half a worker's time pays more per hour than when he gives him employment the year round. From this workers have taken the stand that the employer who practically dominates all the worker's waking hours should pay for the advantage of having some one always ready at need. # EDITORIAL

Boston, Mass., Friday, April 25, 1913

King Nikita's Firm Stand "We will not give up Skutari!" In those words M. Miouchkovitch, the principal Montenegrin envoy at the Paris conference, summed up the situation yesterday. Was the speaker bluffing? That is the question which will naturally occur to every one reading his words. Certainly there has been nothing like it since David faced Goliath in the valley of Elah. On the one side there is the might of Europe, her ships, her armies and her gold, and on the other the tiny poverty-stricken Black Mountain. Yet as Austria talks of mobilizing 40,000 men a suspicion floats through curious, half-startled, uneasy Europe that it may, after all, not be the Black Mountain who is bluffing.

In the whole story of this extraordinary war Montenegro has never uttered a threat she has not lived up to. She was the first to launch herself against the Turks, and she has been the last to sheathe the sword. She has declared in the most open manner through the mouth of her King that she would capture Skutari or she would go under and now that Skutari is hers she declares just as unflinchingly that if Austria is determined to reach Skutari she will have to do so over the bodies of the male population of the country. She held unfalteringly on when the Austrians were massed upon her frontiers. She never faltered when the ironclads steamed up her coasts and made their night capture of the King's little yacht. The allied admirals must have heard the thunder of the guns and seen the red flashes in the darkness the night Tarabosh fell. In the morning they had the King's yacht but the King had Skutari.

Political Europe is contemplating one of her periodical crimes. The idea that Austria is concerned for the autonomy of Albania deceives no one. Austria desires a pied a terre in that country which is more concisely than correctly described as the Balkans. For this Montenegro is to be deprived of what she has fought for and won, just as she was a generation ago. Dare Austria obliterate

Nobody ignores that the Ballplatz has no more scruples than there are letters in the word safety. And though every one knows Russia has given her consent, that was before the midnight guns were booming in Cettinje and the bankers and merchants were singing and dancing in the streets of Belgrade. It will be strange if King Nikita does not keep Skutari or exchange it for something equally valuable.

Tariff Champions in the House

Nothing could illustrate more perfectly the change that time and the discipline of defeat have wrought in the Republican party in the way of chastening than the first speech of the debate following Mr. Underwood's formal introduction of the amended and completed tariff bill. Congressman Gardner was an insurgent against Mr. Cannon when the ex-speaker's power was finally broken. He has been an independent partizan for some years, with more freedom to think and speak than most of his New England colleagues in Congress. Had his advice on important matters of policy been followed by the Republican managers in Massachusetts the party's outlook now might be brighter. That he, with such a record, should have been chosen to open the debate was in itself significant; and his candid words respecting the causes of Democratic supremacy were even more remarkable. If Mr. Gardner can be fairly said to speak for his party, then both the Democratic and the Progressive parties must reckon more seriously than they have been doing with the historic organization that shaped national history for nearly fifty years. It remains to be seen whether men of the type of Mr. Gardner are to control.

Criticism by the Progressive party's champions in the House seems to concentrate more upon the method of revision employed than upon the outcome. With the principle of commission investigation, which the Progressives champion, the Monitor repeatedly has expressed its agreement. But national public opinion is far from assenting as yet; and under present constitutional prescriptions, no commission can have more than advisory duties. Which being the case, any tariff must finally be made by Congress midst scenes and under influences far from ideal.

The most significant words of Mr. Underwood in opening debate were those in which he said that it was a tariff with the consumer rather than the producer dominant. Many citizens are both producer and consumer, hence the contention of some persons that a tariff alteration based on any such distinction has no validity. But as a matter of fact the most rapid gain in population of the past decades has been among a consuming rather than among a producing class, and it is to aid the masses of the multiplying urban centers rather than the rural population and the manufacturers of the towns that the rates have been adjusted.

Railroad Firemen Win

In a decree by the arbitration board formed under the national law, the Erdman act, the railroad firemen of the eastern United States have won an increase in pay amounting to nearly $4,000,000 a year. What is quite as important, the national arbitration law has proved its worth in the settlement of by far the largest problem ever submitted. The extent of the issue is comprehended when it is stated that the decree raises the wages of all locomotive firemen east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio and Potomac rivers, a territory containing a third of the railroad mileage of the nation and carrying very nearly half of both the treight and passenger business. The increase in the wage is from 10 to 12 per cent, in contrast to the 5 per cent awarded the engineers in their arbitrated case, but also different in not being retroactive and going into effect with the filing of the decision. A new basis of the wage schedule is introduced by the weight of the locomotive being taken into account for gradation of the pay.

In all its findings the board seems to have been reasonable and just, and there is full evidence of its members having given the issue a most searching study. The triumph of the arbitration principle is complete. The firemen and the railroads had undertaken the adjustment of their difference without success. A strike was imminent and the country faced a complete suspension of traffic. Mediation by Judge Knapp of the commerce court and G. W. W. Hanger, acting commissioner of labor, failed. Then the effort of these two officials brought the Erdman law into operation. A vice-president of the Pennsylvania railroad and an official of the firemen's brotherhood were selected by the opposing interests and the third arbitrator chosen by the judge of the commerce court. The impartial board has brought about a settlement in which all the issues are met and all the parties brought to consent. The story of the use of the national instrumentality for adjusting labor disputes is recounted to give emphasis to the fact that there has been found an effective means of settlement. Apprehension will appear, as it always does, that the increase of pay will seriously affect the railroads or that it will be passed on to the public in a lessened service or increased charges.

Neither predicted result need alarm. The railroads of this great region are prosperous. They have means of retrenchment that will not lessen their service, as the students of railroad wastefulness have pointed out. Finally, there is no public concern greater than the fair pay of men charged with a share in operating the great machines by which freight is drawn and passengers carried with safety and efficiency over the rails. Railroad solvency is least of all imperiled by the wage item.

One of

the Proudest

Boasts of

Kansas

For threescore of years, at least, Kansas has been in the limelight. Even before it became a state, and when its population was sparse, it seemed to possess beyond any of its sisters along the frontier, or on either side of it, the faculty of focusing national attention. The original progressives of the nation founded Kansas, and while they may have expressed themselves from time to time under different partizan political banners, it cannot be truthfully said that Kansans have at any time, even temporarily, ceased to be original or progressive. They are as original and progressive today as they ever were. The story of their triumph over the "Great American Desert" has often been told. They found Kansas treeless and desolate; they have made it a grove and a garden; they found it in buffalo grass; they have sown it with all the golden cereals; they found themselves on the firing line of the great internal disturbance that once divided the republic, they found themselves in the vanguard of civilization, they found that they must bear the brunt of resistance to the onward strides of a restless and migrating race, they were confronted with flood and drouth, with the unchecked sweep of the Rocky mountain hurricane, with the plagues of the wilderness, with ruined crops, with mortgaged homes—they passed through it all with fortitude, and they have come out of it all with victory.

Today Kansas is contented, enlightened, a magnificent producer, a lender rather than a borrower, the home of universities, colleges, seminaries, academies, schools; the friend of culture, the patron of the automobile, a land of handsome farmhouses and big barns, and, as has been its custom at intervals through all its years, today it is boasting. This time, however, its voice is not raised in political exultation, it is not flattering itself on the size of its crops, it is not asking that admiring ears and eyes be turned toward its orators or its sweet singers, it is not defiantly hurling a reply back to its favorite but all too daring son, William Allen White, who once conceived the idea that there was something the matter with it. It is doing none of these things. It is simply boasting of its girls.

There are no better girls to be found anywhere in the world, declares Kansas, than those born and bred and educated within its own borders. They are everything, says Kansas, that girls should be. They are blooming, blushing and bright. Their percentages in school are above the average. They are learning not only to grace the parlor but to supervise the home. They know a lot, and are learning more, about farming. They are practical. They are everything that the most exacting could desire in girls, and yet they are girls. The nation is proud of its daughters as a whole, but that will not prevent it from joining with Kansas in a special celebration over its discovery that the Kansas girls are the best of all the Kansas products.

Book and Newspaper IN A RECENT address before the Philadelphia Booksellers Association, a society of a type that is multiplying now that book venders are becoming democratic like other merchants, it was argued by a local author of some note that the newspaper is dependent on the book. "Does not the newspaper in the end get its bottom ideas and abiding principles of civilization from books?" asked the speaker. If by a book is meant a critique of government like that of Montesquieu or of the authors of The Federalist, or any classic, then the greatest of daily chroniclers of present-day history would admit that he needed them to give depth, range and insight to his comment. But if it is meant that for success in journalism today, even in conformity to the highest ideals of the calling, it is necessary for the writer to know the inside of any considerable number of the books issuing from the press, the statement is questionable.

Thinkers of a nation now find ways of getting publicity prior to book publication. All this is grist to those journalists who can count on adequate reporting of the innumerable speeches and addresses given from one year's end to another in large centers of population. Combining this expression of opinion by experts with his own scrutiny of the news of the day the journalist comes to his own decision. It is not denied that often he would write more weightily if he knew the contents of books written by experts. It is not denied that a newspaper writer conversant with standard works of history, biography and belles-lettres and able to quote aptly and effectively is a useful member of a staff. The only point now being stressed is this, that neither book publishers nor authors should flatter themselves that the world of journalism is dependent on the world of literature. The bottom ideas of a civilization at any stage of a race's or a nation's existence are derived from social experience and from individual insight. In these days they often find expression and world publicity through the daily press long before they get the more formal record of the book.

IN THIS age of automatics it is rather a remarkable circumstance that nobody has invented the self-spading back lot.

A TREATY-MAKING generation must be a treaty-keeping one if it is to meet successfully the tests imposed by subsequent historians with ethical ideals. Nations, like individuals, vary much in their reputation for veracity and fidelity to pledges; and a deceitful and evasive race earns a retribution that outweighs all temporary gains from contract-breaking. Is the present generation unmindful of this teaching of history? It would Treaty Breaking and Keeping ften seem so as evidence accumulates indicating that some public men in nations hitherto scrupulous in the matter are inclined to depreciate the sanctity that has come to attach to the treaty-pledge. Modern Europe has had recent examples of indifference to formally pledged assurances of good will and friendliness; and in the United States there are lawmakers, and political leaders who make alleged present necessity justify acts which the nation is pledged not to do.

An individual who puts his alleged or real pecuniary needs above the code of honor to which he has subscribed allegiance come what may, falls in the esteem of his former friends and of the public. So do nations if they make light of treaty pledges. Not until the United States comes to terms with the state of Colombia will the influence of the United States again be what it should be in Latin America. The work of two generations of American educators, missionaries and diplomats working in Japan is imperiled now because of indifference in California to aught but local necessities. Anti-British feeling in the Senate may wreck the structure of arbitration that has been building since the days of President Cleveland.

Treaties that are broken deliberately do not cease to be remembered because so set aside. They often are the prelude to war. A nation that has a slight opinion of its plighted word cannot complain much if it has to undergo criticism that is caustic and see depreciation of its credit follow in due time. However, a majority of congressmen still put honor above expansion of territory or any growth of the nation in mere wealth. They wish the national record as to veracity to be maintained.

CHICAGO loved Douglas no less because it loved Lincoln more. It raised one of its first monuments to his memory, it named one of its finest parks in his honor. There is a Douglas boulevard within its borders, and, in fact, the name of Douglas is writ all over the metropolis of the state he helped to bring into distinction while it was still very young. It may be said that Chicago has divided its affection pretty equally between the great Vermonter and the great Kentuckian.

IN RELATION to at least one phase of his subject, Harvey S. Chase of Boston, who recently addressed the Massachusetts Society of Certified Accountants on "The National Budget and the Work of the President's Commission on Economy and Efficiency." found himself at a disadvantage—such a disadvantage as must be encountered by anybody forced to deal with a partially immature proposition. Although a skilful accountant, and in that capacity consulting adviser to the treasury at Washington, he was compelled, and for a very good reason, to omit discussion of current or possible treasury resources. Two things are essential to the making of a complete budget, whether it be national, state or municipal. The first is something like definite knowledge of available revenue; the second is the adjustment of expenditures to this revenue. It is not possible to fix any definite revenue from year to year. The duty of a British chancellor of the exchequer involves the creation of revenue from some old or new sources in order to meet new requirements in expenditure. In a sense, all chancellors must make provision for both sides of the budget. In the United States with infrequent interruption, and under established protective and internal revenue systems, the probable revenues from year to year have been easily estimated.

Strong Plea for a National Budget

But a change is impending at present. As Mr. Chase remarks: "Of course, no man can estimate what Congress is going to do with the tariff, or what it is going to do with the income tax." But whether it be assumed or not that the national revenue shall be as ample as ever, the manner of disbursing that revenue is the real-point of importance.

Mr. Chase goes over the ground carefully and thoroughly, dealing with present methods of preparing estimates, pointing out wherein there is antagonism between the executive and legislative branches of the government, reviewing the work of the President's commission, in the last administration, and summarizing some of the more important proceedings of that body. Incorporated in the latter is a paragraph containing the gist of his own recommendations. He advises that there be established a new "central administrative division" to be directly under the President and a part of the executive office, which shall take from the treasury the accounting, auditing and investigating features, now elements of that department, and establish them in this central executive board. This "central administrative division" would, in actual operation, be the source of information for congressmen and others desiring to obtain estimates of the departments, as well as an agency for the adjustment of differences. He very properly remarks in this connection that the treasury being a coordinate department with those for which it prepares estimates, it would be better to centralize this work in the executive. "No head of a department," he says, "desires the head of another department to come in and investigate his office, but no secretary would make serious objection to an investigation by the President or by his immediate representative.'

This is true, and it is encouraging to find from Mr. Chase's conclusions that the prospects of the adoption of a budget system along lines that will appeal to the commendation of expert accountants are bright. It will be a long stride forward when the present system of managing the government's expenditures shall have given way to one devised in accordance with sound business principles.
